ENGLISH 403: SHAKESPEARE: THE EARLY WORKS

COURSE DESCRIPTION

“I used it as a cover. I could never have done it without Shakespeare.” Marina Bekker, scriptwriter for Death of A Queen, a Macbeth revision made for the South African Broadcast Company, 2008.

Close study of selected works from the first half of Shakespeare's career. Early histories, comedies, tragedies, narrative poetry, considering: cultural contexts; character; dramatic technique; form; genre; language; poetics; sources; style; theme, especially as related to migration and war. We will take special note of the ideas of the tragic and the comic as they organize and give meaning to experience and life. We will also be especially interested in the plays in their editorial, publication, theatrical, and performance contexts, in Shakespeare’s time and in our own.

Methods
This course is writing-intensive and discussion-based, with students participating actively. I foster discussion with in-class writing and small group assignments. In addition, students will focus their attention, using a variety of analytical tools, on considering the ways people around the world appropriate Shakespeare’s texts for their own contemporary purposes.

Requirements and Grades
Grades will be based on:

• Final Project: contribution to an on-line reader’s guide (includes research exercise, research report, “poster” presentation of preliminary findings, and 7-10 pp research project or the equivalent, 20% in sum)
• Final examination (10%).
• Mini Projects: Recitation, Performance Response, Special Collections Activity (10% in sum)
• Participation (discussion and in-class assignments, 20% in sum)
• Postings: 6. 1-2 pp or 250-500 words apiece. (5% each, 30% in sum)
• Quizzes (10%)

Additional information about these assignments is included in this document, below, and is available on ELMS.

All course-related policies follow University of Maryland guidelines, available here:
http://www.ugst.umd.edu/courserelatedpolicies.html

Note that attendance will radically affect the class participation grade. You will be quizzed at the beginning or end of each class period. Most classes also include a graded activity or in-class assignment. Students with more than three unexcused absences will be unable to earn an A in participation, and since participation and quizzes cannot be made up, absences will impact those grades as well. Course preparation outside of class should average two to three hours of study for every hour in class. Regular attendance and participation in class are the best ways to grapple with the readings under consideration in this course.

If you are having trouble with the course materials or the workload, come talk with me or send email as soon as you recognize the problem. If an assignment overwhelms you, we need to develop a plan of action together. Submitting other people’s efforts as your own will submarine you, both in the short and the long term. Avoidance will cause different sorts of complications for you. It is my job to help you with academic issues or concerns; I can also direct you to myriad resources on campus.
Papers, Projects, and Reports: Typed, double-spaced, with 1” margins, in a “standard” 12-point font (Arial, Calibri, Cambria, Helvetica, Times, or the like). Number the pages. Include the title on the first page. Your name should not appear in the file name, the body text, or as part of the page header.

Evaluation Criteria for most written work is described more fully in rubrics in ELMS:
- Thesis and exigence: 20%
- Proof: 20%
- Analysis: 20%
- Argument and organization: 20%
- Stylistics: 20%

Performance Response: View a global Shakespeare performance—one from the world beyond Britain and the US—and write a 250-500 word response, using the criteria and suggestions available in the online course space.

Quizzes: Will happen at the beginning of class each time we begin a play or have reading assigned, and will happen at the end of class on other days. Will primarily be drawn from study questions available on line, although will also include text identification, explication exercises, and a quick question to help synthesize work in class. With the study questions and your reading more generally, you may decide to generate a reading “notebook.” It may be a password-protected blog, a Word or Google document, or a more traditional written notebook. You are welcome to use these notes in the quizzes, with one caveat: they must be in printed form as you refer to them. You cannot have access to a computer or to the internet during quizzes.

Readings: Complete assigned plays or readings from the Globe Guide to Shakespeare before the class day for which the quiz is listed. You are responsible for the whole play on the first day and may need to re-read. Study questions will be available on ELMS.

Recitations. During your recitation appointment, you will recite 14 lines (or the equivalent) of a portion of Shakespeare’s text of your choosing. You may select something we are reading in class, but you need not. If you want to learn a sonnet, for example, that would fulfill this assignment. You will need to be able to interpret the text as well as recite it, and I will ask why you’ve chosen the text with which you are working. You may also use this appointment to discuss reading strategies or other concerns.

Report. You will be assigned a book, on reserve at McKeldin, for which you will need to provide an on-line evaluation. Your goal is to help those not reading the book know what’s in it and what might be useful for our collective understanding of “Global Shakespeares.” You especially will assess such components as its key argument(s), its critical framework(s), and the key texts with which it engages.
Study Questions will be available on ELMS.

Final Project. Research paper (or the equivalent) exploring Shakespeare’s global appropriations, or considering some aspect of migration or war as it appears in one or two of Shakespeare’s plays.

Final version, equivalent to 7-10 pp. of formal writing or 2,000-3,000 words excluding works cited, due on ELMS at 11:59 pm December 8.

Learning Goals: For one of Shakespeare’s plays, you will need to:
- Identify genre
- Attend to form
- Consider meaning
- Analyze style and language
- Assess aspects of historical significance
- Scrutinize the text’s strategies of representation
- Explicate perspective or perspectives operating within the text

For this final project, you will also need to:
- Conduct research
- Identify productive and legitimate sources
- Show effective use of research tools
- Distinguish your own argument from those made by other scholars
- Engage primary sources with critical understanding

Here, you will offer a sustained argument about the play. You will need to grapple with secondary sources. You might build upon discoveries you’ve made in earlier papers, or you might broaden your scope or head in another direction entirely.

Final Exam: Mon 14 May 8 am to 10 am

A standard in-class examination. You can expect to see identification, short answer, and two essays. You will have choices. We may generate some of the questions together in the review session, and/or I may pull un-used questions from on-line study guides
